1) PROJECT INFORMATION

Field of expertise related to the topic: knowledge organisation and dissemination, synthesising and systematisation of knowledge, networking and sharing of information, applying science and technology research findings across encyclopaedic editions, popularisation of science

Potential contribution to the project: One of the main goals of the Miroslav Krleža Institute of Lexicography is to upgrade its encyclopaedic open access online content with the intention to develop public knowledge of the highest scientific relevance, which would serve as a platform for knowledge networking and sharing. Creation of such an open repository of organised knowledge would help reinforce European research e-infrastructure and would also serve as didactic tools. Encyclopaedias have always been the means for dissemination of scientifically verified and consolidated information. However, digital technologies and innovations in the field of knowledge networking lead to a paradigm shift, as networking of information from different sources (encyclopaedias, digital libraries, museums, archives etc.) enables new insights, and as such might generate new knowledge. In addition, since encyclopaedias have always formed an important part of the infrastructure for learning in institutions like schools, libraries and universities, online encyclopaedic content represents an indispensable didactic material. Open access online encyclopaedias could also influence lifelong learning and acquiring knowledge with the help of the Internet for all citizens. By means of the collaborative tools the quality of the encyclopaedic content could be assessed, thus enabling the evaluation of public knowledge by its own users

Project idea: We could participate in projects within this call with the purpose of establishing open access online encyclopaedias as an innovative didactic tool, as well as a part of virtual collections, using various digital open access encyclopaedic editions described in Short profile of organization. Furthermore, ongoing encyclopaedic projects, such as the Croatian Encyclopaedia of Technology, could be adapted to the requirements of a potential project proposal. This project was initiated in 2014 and has been carried out in collaboration with all the relevant institutions within the field (academies, higher education institutions, research institutions, museums, industry). Besides its contribution to understanding the role of technology in a social and cultural context, it will serve as a platform for knowledge networking and sharing, thus facilitating research and education within the Croatian history of technology. Due to the importance of technological artefacts in research and education, the traditional textual encyclopaedic content will be upgraded using available digital data about the artefacts accessible to the public, thus creating a virtual museum of technology. In addition, this innovative Encyclopaedia will contribute to the revalorisation and the sustainability of the technology heritage.

Short profile of the Organisation: The Miroslav Krleža Institute of Lexicography is a public institution of special interest for the Republic of Croatia. Since its foundation in 1950 it has published more than 250 different encyclopaedias, dictionaries, lexicons and other issues. The main role of the Institute is based on the activity of lexicography and encyclopaedistics which through systematising, synthesising and distributing information gives the opportunity for a reliable access to global knowledge. Furthermore, the role of the Institute is to research and understand Croatia's natural and historic heritage, as well as to preserve its cultural and social identity. The Institute's potential lies in the huge resources of created and stored knowledge, which are continuously being digitised and as such it is becoming accessible to a large number of users via the Institute's web pages. At present, the Portal of Knowledge (<http://enciklopedija.lzmk.hr>) offers free access to more than 60,000 articles from seven digitised encyclopaedias and lexicons. Also, online and freely available editions currently are Croatian Encyclopaedia (<http://enciklopedija.hr>) and Proleksis Encyclopaedia (<http://proleksis.lzmk.hr>) – the two general encyclopaedias that emphasise contents regarding Croatian national heritage, which together comprise more than 120,000 articles. They are continuously updated and expanded. Croatia - land and people (<http://www.croatia.eu>) is an encyclopaedic monograph published in collaboration with the Ministry of Foreign and European Affairs, while the digital edition of the Lexicon of Marin Držić (<http://leksikon.muzej-marindrzc.eu/>) is published in collaboration with the House of Marin Držić in Dubrovnik. Apart from the encyclopaedic content, the web pages of the Institute offer access to the digitised Author Catalogue (<http://katalog.lzmk.hr>) of the Catalogue of Retrospective Bibliography of the Articles which in total is comprised of 10 million leaflets containing lists of articles from periodicals published in the South-Slavic area in the period from the end of the 18th century until the year 1945. Open access to the Institute's peer-reviewed scientific journal Studia lexicographica is also available (<http://studialexicographica.lzmk.hr/>).
